The flames broke out so suddenly and so fiercely that the occupants of the building that the occupants of the building were taken by surprise, and there was a wild panie, men and women jumping from the windows is their night clothes. An explosion was heard in the kitchen in the rear part of the second story, by S. F. Butler, a son of the proprietor, and impractiately the flames marked: "That! I know nothing about I get my instructions and obey them; that is all."

Secretary Morton was at his deak monday morning, if being his first appearance since his return from Europe. He said the matter was of such recent occurrence that he could not talk much about it until he had examined the subject.

The prohibition which had been imposed by Belgium, he thought, would be of but short duration, for on the lith of this month Minister Ewing at Brussels and Consul Roosevelt told him that such were the indications, the prohibition having put up the price of hibition having put up the price of meat in Brussels to such an extent that the people were protesting. The cause for this action on the part of the saule of the authorities was said to be the discovery of pleuro-pneumonia in American at the country of pleuro-pneumonia in American exists.

"Conserning the German prohibition," continued Mr. Morton, "I will say that the American packing interests that control the dressed meat output—beef, pork and milton—ough to form a corporation and put affort a guadron of refrigerator ships, if necessary, and send nothing to Europe but show the most was a more than the proposed that the meat was diseased, and there would be more profit in the work for would be more profit in the work for should be more profit
